In Memory of a Visionary Leader William James Bailey, 1947 – 2005

These are the words that came to my mind when thinking about Bill: highly intelligent, high work ethics, compassion for health of children, optimism, high integrity, high standards for himself and others, a great mentor, master teacher, visionary, organizer, a man of value, principle and integrity. I believe these words personify what Professor Bailey's professional and personal life was all about.

William J. Bailey passed away on January 29, 2005.

These descriptions of Bill remind me of a verse written by Sadi, a Persian poet in the 13th century. A simplistic translation of this verse is if you leave a good name behind, it is far better than a golden castle. While Professor Bailey left a great name behind, he also left better than a golden castle. He left a legacy that has and continues to impact in a positive way, the lives of defenseless children. Alcohol and other drug use continue to decline among children because of Professor Bailey.

In memory of his great leadership, we share with you the remarks of other great leaders who share their loss with you.

~ Mohammad R. Torabi, Ph.D.
Chair, Department of Applied Health Science
Executive Director, Indiana Prevention Resource Center
Indiana University, Bloomington

"Bill was quite selfless and worked so very hard on substance abuse prevention. His principles, values, vision, and passion helped move Indiana to a statewide prevention network even before the first state incentive grant was awarded. He used science to make the suggested changes to our prevention system to get the most from every dollar invested."

~ John Viernes, Deputy Director
Office of Addiction and Emergency Preparedness
Division of Mental Health and Addiction

"His leadership and vision has helped chart our course in prevention and he will be missed!"

~ Rebecca L. Smith, Program Director
Grassroots Prevention Coalition of Clark County

"Bill launched a campaign for science-based prevention strategies and programs before “science-based” became a national mandate. He envisioned a State where children would have healthy alternative activities in the after school hours. He invested hundreds of hours in grant-seeking and won the largest prevention grant in the history of the state, establishing after school programs in cities across the state.”

~ Barbara Seitz de Martinez, Ph.D., Deputy Director
Indiana Prevention Resource Center

“Nowhere is Bill’s visionary leadership so exemplified than in his use of information technology. Bill was years ahead of the rest of the prevention community when it came to adopting innovative technologies and applying them to prevention. Software that Bill designed, such as PREV-STAT™, has empowered communities by placing local, state, and national data at the fingertips of the prevention provider. PREV-STAT™ is a perfect example of Bill’s spirited innovation.”

~ Roger Morris, Computer Systems Coordinator
Indiana Prevention Resource Center

“Bill’s legacy will live on, through the lives of those he touched with his many works. We will all remember, in our own way, Bill’s wonderful contribution: to his family, to his loved ones, to the field of prevention and drug education, for the vision he gave to the university and departments he served, and simply as a man of faith.”

~ Mark Allen Pogue
Education and Training Coordinator
Indiana Prevention Resource Center

“I admired Bill for many things. One of the things that I admired most was how he took pride in and was loyal to the things he believed in. He took pride in being a part of many different things in his life. He worked to put Indiana in the forefront of prevention and truly believed that you could have an impact on drug use before it ever started--and took great pride in how Indiana lead in this effort.”

~ Mary Lay
Coordinator of the Indiana Problem Gambling
Prevention Initiative, FSSA/Division of Mental Health and Addiction

“He was a pioneer and passionate advocate for prevention in our State.”

~ W. G. Wooten, MD
Chairman of the Board, Youth First Inc.

“Bill will be remembered for all the good work he did for Indiana’s prevention system and the people that it serves.”

~ Jim Wolf, Director
Indiana University Public Opinion Laboratory

“Bailey’s influence in the field of prevention can be seen in the form of citations in the literature in which he published, and in that of other fields. Bailey’s articles have been cited in journals in behavioral science, criminal justice, neuropharmacology, psychopharmacology, school health, addiction, psychiatry, public health, medicine, communications, and safety.”

~ Carole Nowicke, Ph.D.
Reference Librarian, Indiana Prevention Resource Center

“Professor Bailey’s contributions to the field of substance abuse prevention is evidenced by his enormous contributions to both the science and the practice of prevention. He played a major role in initiating and sustaining the countless ATOD prevention programs and services offered throughout the state, and also in improving the prevention knowledge-base. Bill’s legacy will live through the work of the countless people he mentored and inspired - the practitioners, administrators and researchers throughout the nation who are now making contributions of their own.”

~ E. Lisako Jones-McKyer, Ph.D., MPH
